Methods/Results

2014 Psych Fest
2nd Year Presenters

Participants:
• 2nd Year Doctoral Students (N = 6)
• Distinguished Speaker (N = 1)

Participants:
• 2nd Year Doctoral Students (N = 6)
• Distinguished Speaker (N = 1)

1:10pm
Interacting diatheses in soldiers deployed to Iraq: A prospective, multi-wave analysis of PTSD, anxiety and depression symptom trajectories

1:30pm
Identification of risk and protective factors in the emergence of psychopathology in EMS medics

1:50pm
Sexual intentions and negative affect: While drinking and next day

2:10pm
The relation between attention bias and symptom severity during and following cognitive-behavioral therapy for social anxiety disorder

2:30pm
Serotonin promoter polymorphism (5-HTTLPR) predicts biased attention for emotional stimuli: Moderation by the social environment

2:50pm
Am I good or bad?: The serotonin transporter polymorphism is associated with biased processing of negative self-referent information

Note: For ease in presentation residual variances are not displayed.

15th Annual Psych Fest
Adam Cobb, Leslie Rice, Emily Wilhite, Michelle Davis, Rahel Pearson, Justin Dainer-Best, & Dr. Ian Gotlib
The University of Texas at Austin

Introduction

What: Second-year clinical psychology doctoral students present their recent research, and a distinguished speaker gives a guest lecture.
Where: Room 1.302 of the Julius Glickman Conference Center, at the Liberal Arts Building (CLA; see Appendix).
When: 1:00 pm on Friday, April 11th, 2014.
Who: Attendance is open to presenter guests, and to all UT students, faculty, and staff.

Distinguished Speaker (3:45pm):
Dr. Ian Gotlib, Stanford University
Understanding and Reducing Risk for Depression

Appendix

At the CLA
Liberal Arts Building, 1.302

Conclusion

Reception (4:50pm)